Once again time has raced by, & we have even launched a small exposition in a delightful café called Le Caméléon in Montfort-sur-Argens. It is a café associative, & only open for a few days a week-but a very relaxed atmosphere, with plenty of shelves full of games, scrabble, chess etc. I went there to see some paintings of a friend, & asked if I could do the same, which has resulted in a place to hang our paintings until the end of May. Three of the easy-art group have joined in & hung their paintings & we had a very successful vernissage at the beginning of April. We have even sold some paintings which is always satisfying, so, on we go, watch this space.
